Vocational Students Hear Marshall Gardner

"You deserve great credit for recognizing the educational opportunity offered by the Cone Vocational Night School," stated Marshall Gardner, assistant vice president of Cone Mills Corporation, when he addressed the annual Vocational School banquet at Proximity YMCA last Saturday night. Three received diplomas, and 50 received certificates. Arnold Tidwell, assistant overseer of Weaving, at White Oak Plant, was master of ceremonies. Raymond Kincaid, superintendent of Proximity Plant, introduced the speaker.

Defining education as growth, Mr. Gardner pointed out that America is today's richest and most powerful nation because, in addition to natural resources, nearly every American who has sincerely desired an education of some kind has been able to get it.

Pointing out that education is at work every day in the lives of everyone, Mr. Gardner reminded the group that American industry in its competitive spirit is spending huge sums in research learning how to produce better and cheaper materials.

"Every day an opportunity arises for every man to improve himself through growth in knowledge and usefulness in his relationships with his fellow man and with God. How far any of us goes in growing depends upon us and how much we are willing to apply ourselves," stated the speaker.

Music was by the Cone Maids.

Red Cross Thanks Cone Employees

J. M. Fullton, chairman of the Greensboro Chapter of the American Red Cross 1954 Fund Campaign, expressed his appreciation today to the management and employees of Cone Mills who supported the drive. He also expressed thanks to The Textorian for "splendid coverage of the drive."

The total amount donated by Cone Mills employees was considerably less than last year's. Mr. Fullton called attention to the fact that contributions may still be made through March 31.

A Thought for the Week....

EDNA PLANT SUGGESTION—Claude Childrey is the proud winner of a Cone Mills cash award for his suggestion. His idea was putting casters on legs of the chairs used by cloth inspectors. This naturally makes the chairs easier to move while the inspector is seated.

UNC CLASS AT WHITE OAK—A class in Personnel Management and Professor Richard Calhoun, standing, left, of the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, toured White Oak Plant Tuesday of last week. Here they are shown after their tour when they gathered in the plant conference room for a discussion period. Questions asked by the students were answered by Chester Arnold, standing, second from left, personnel director of Cone Mills, and George Hamer, third, assistant personnel director. Guides for the group were, standing, Norman Pinkelton, Paul Cockman, Buddy Brown and Bernard Sizemore.

The Public Alone Can Be Responsible For More Statesmanship

The more we observe the conduct of many of our elected representatives in Washington, the more we appreciate the problems they face in trying to perform their duties and at the same time safeguard their political positions.

At times we become thoroughly disgusted at the performances of some Congressmen and Senators when we know full well that in many instances they are not following their best judgment but are "playing politics."

As we analyze the situation, we become less bitter in our condemnation of political practices because we realize that re-election may be dependent upon the positions they take, regardless of their true merit.

If we go behind the political scene as demonstrated on the Washington political stage, we find that we, the voting citizens, may be the bad actors and not our representatives.

Too often, action taken in Washington is not farsighted, does not make sound economic sense, and puts off the day of reckoning so that future generations will suffer from our present excesses.

We have never subscribed to the theory that it does not make any difference how much we go into debt so long as we owe the money to ourselves. The disciples of such a philosophy fail to realize that even though the national debt is never reduced or liquidated (which it should be), the interest on the indebtedness must be taken care of by the taxpayers. The greater the debt, the more the government will have to pay as interest on the bonds it has to sell to provide necessary funds.

Even those who do not pay high taxes may think they escape the penalty of government indebtedness, but it does not require very much thinking through to realize that every citizen is either directly or indirectly assessed to provide for government obligations.

Getting back to the behavior of our representatives, although we are tolerant of their political circumstances, we do feel that political strategy has played and is playing too great a part in their public services.

We have a slight hope that the public generally is becoming more aware of the position they force their representatives into. We believe more and more people are beginning to think ahead and are less willing to champion those who would benefit them even temporarily if they depart from sound reasoning. Good citizenship means thinking beyond today to consideration of the future generation and the future of the country as a whole.

With the election coming up this fall we will behold more and more political maneuvering. A lot of it will be entirely remote from sound reasoning and fact presentation. Political propaganda will frequently be clouded and misrepresent the true facts and issues. It is our hope that regardless of party affiliation or preference, the American people will become realistic and will be more conscious of the fact that many times office-holders seeking re-election or candidates seeking election will make promises not for the eventual common good but because they feel that they will receive more votes by so acting.

In our opinion the situation is more serious than it appears on the surface. The public alone can be responsible for the development of more statesmanship and less political maneuvering.

Hard luck hit the Proximity Comets as they suffered two defeats by the Proximity Goats last Monday night at the Proximity Y.M.C.A. How a ball could come so close on spares and then miss, I'll never know, but both teams had difficulty in getting their pins.

Neiers

Eugene Neiers, one of the top bowlers for the Comets, was off his game for about the first time this year.

The Goats remain in first place, five games ahead of the Rayon office. Jim, "under pressure," Fuller must have been submerged, bowling not his usual game, but hitting only a high of 98 for the night. Bill Pennington, a much improved bowler, gave the Goats their support with assistance from Byron Calhoun.

The Comets were so far off from their usual style of bowling, that one would think they were using Vine Street back alley. I've seen one or two bowlers off his course, but never a whole team.

At the Proximity Y.M.C.A. on Tuesday night, the Rayon team kept their one game lead over the Payroll office by defeating the Revolution office two games to one. Harvey Gordon and Charles Rink kept the Rayon team in the running by bowling sets of 305 and 300 pins respectively.

Will Marshburn led the Revolution team by bowling his best game of the year, 113, and also his best set, with a total of 304 pins. Ventry Hinshaw came through in fine style also bowling his best game of the year and actually giving the Revolution team their only win for the night.

The Payroll Office defeated the Laboratory two games to one Tuesday night at the White Oak Y. M. C. A. to remain in third place. Howard Pickard, back up to par, led the Payroll team with a three game total of 308 pins. James Weaver, 96, and Bill Taylor, 91, were also among the top bowlers.

The Laboratory was getting the bad breaks again this week — the pins fell every way but down. Rudolph Cox and Fits Seabolt led their teammates, but not in their usual bowling manner.

The Rayon Team captured the honors of high team set and game this week, having a high total of 1,371 and 476 pins. Howard Pickard had high individual game with 116 pins. Ray Smith still has the high individual average with a total of 97.5 pins per game.

Week of March 26

Although having more total pins for the three game set, the Laboratory was defeated by the Revolution Office two games to one, last Monday night at the Proximity Y.M.C.A. The Revolution team got off to a bad start, but finally settled down as Will Marshburn and "Tee" Ward pulled their teammates through to victory. It looks as though "Tee" was right when he said, "The older fellows get better as they go along." What's that boys?

Thomas, "no foul line" Coffer, and Fits Seabolt led the Lab team, but their margin fell short by only a few pins the last two games.

The Proximity Goats came through in fine style (making up for last week) by defeating the Payroll Office two games to one at the Proximity Y.M.C.A. Jim Fuller had a high game of 115 and a three game set of 309 to lead his team as they kept their lead for first place.

Because of outstanding scores by Jim Fuller, Byron Calhoun, Ray Smith, Bill Pennington, and Monroe Whitt, the Goats broke the record for the high team set formerly held by the Rayon team.

The Payroll Office did some outstanding bowling also, led by Howard Pickard's 109, James Weaver's 111, and Deo White's 97. However, they fell short in the last game, loosing it by only 13 pins. Actually, the Payroll Office bowled their best set of the year. Watch out for these boys in the tournament!

At the White Oak Y.M.C.A. bedlam broke out as the Rayon Office defeated the Proximity Comets two games to one. These two teams were sure full of pep; in fact, they showed the most excitement that I've seen in the league. (After watching some of these boys jump around, I might recommend them for the June Taylor dance group after the bowling season is over.)

The Rayon was led by Harvey "as per usual," Gordon, Roger, "hot and cold," Johnson, and Charles Rink. (Jack must have taken my hint two weeks ago.)

The Comets, bowling without their number one man, Gene Neiers, was led by Big Jim Ward, who finally settled down and gave the Comets the support that he is capable of giving. D. O. Myrick was also an outstanding bowler for the Comets.

High team game and set for this week go to the Proximity Goats, having a total of 488 pins, respectively.

High individual game goes to Jim Ward with a total of 119 pins, while high individual set goes to Jim Fuller with a total of 309 pins. High individual average for total games bowled goes to Ray Smith with a total of 97.6 per game.

Standings are:

| Team | Won | Lost |
|---|---|---|
| Proximity Goats | 23 | 7 |
| Rayon | 18 | 12 |
| Payroll | 16 | 14 |
| Proximity Comets | 10 | 14 |
| Revolution | 12 | 18 |
| Laboratory | 5 | 19 |

Mentally Retarded To Get Training In City Schools

Greensboro Chapter of the North Carolina Association of Friends and Parents of Mentally Retarded Children reports that more than 240 children in Greensboro need special training.

According to statistics, 80 per cent of the inmates in penal institutions are mentally retarded and are in prison as a result of frustration because they have been unsuccessful in competing with normal people. The proposed local program would combat this cause.

The Greensboro Board of Education this month approved employment of a director for the program in the city, according to B. L. Smith, superintendent. Felix Barker, state superintendent of public instruction, has said that the state will allot salaries for six instructors of these exceptional children.

The association of Friends and Parents of Mentally Retarded Children has offered six scholarships to teachers for study in this field.

Charlotte is now caring for 540 children who are mentally retarded. There are 40 special teachers in the school system there with 15 pupils each. From first to third grade, all handled by the same teacher in one school, the child is watched for various aptitudes in fields in which he might excell. He is given the chance to compete with normal children in these lines.

A mentally retarded child is not ill, but deficient in certain mental faculties. Any family can have a mentally retarded child; the condition is not necessarily hereditary.

The program needed locally would provide more time for the teacher to spend with individuals and a program of educational games and manual training later leading to certain vocational training.
